Estretas Cons.—Several months since we informed our readers of the profile qualities of the Keyptian Corn. It surpresses all anticipations, and is just the article needed in this country. To think that an aero of land can yield 150 busbels of good corn, and particularly when two crops can be gathered in a year, seems to be so exangerated that it requires the many independents of the Prose in general and the best and most rainfold men in Virginia to give it full belief.

We have received some of the curp from Mr. Lindsey. The sample is a beautiful one.—[Times, Natchitoches, Miss., Dec. 21, 1867.
